Tahitian noni fruit is an ancient remedy so powerful, some people around the world called it magical, while those in Tahiti called it medicine.

Lifeline of the Pacific

When Polynesians sailed the South Pacific in their canoes, they brought along noni for its legendary healing properties.

During their voyages, they also picked the finest noni fruits from each island to cultivate in Tahiti, which resulted in French Polynesia becoming the world's best source of iridoid-potent noni fruit.[†]
