Giving musicians and photographers what they need to thrive

The name 'Community Fibre' definitely fits. I felt a strong community feel from them which didn't feel like being approached by a big corporation. They are so approachable and personable, and it just feels like you're talking with people who are on your side, and that you have allies helping you get the project over the line. The network is very, very good, and I would definitely recommend them to anybody.

The client

With 11 individual studio spaces to its name, 3CAD Studios is a hive of creative activity. For over seven years, creatives have enjoyed the facilities at 3CAD studios, but despite the physical attributes of the studios themselves, there was one thing holding them back – slow internet. With musicians, photographers, and producers alike renting space on a monthly basis for a wide variety of projects, being able to facilitate quick file transfers for several groups of people simultaneously became a top priority.

The challenge

Creative projects mean big files. Whether producing an album, doing a fashion shoot, or recording instruments, uploading, downloading and sharing is a crucial part of a creative's work. Located in an industrial estate amongst local construction businesses with little need for an advanced connection, 3CAD Studios has been up against it from the start. After five years of failed attempts to find a solution with other major broadband providers, they received a welcomed knock on the door from a Community Fiber representative.

The solution

Community Fibre made sure that 3CAD Studios weren't left behind. After visiting the site to understand the challenges the team were facing, the necessary lines were installed to provide the premises with a GIGAFast connection, which delivers 1 Gbps download and upload speeds. Now, large teams have no issue at all sharing this connection when carrying out shoots and sessions, meaning that day-to-day operations are smoother than ever for everyone in the building.
